APPLEFEST DONATION

The runners aren't the only winners at the Applefest Half Marathon in Hollis.

Co-Race Directors and Gate City Strider members, Chet Rogers (left) and Emily Strong presents Dr Frank Bass, principal of the Hollis Brookline High School with a check for the Dollars for Scholars program. The fall half marathon in Hollis has been a choice destination of the New England running community for 19 years. The town Hollis offers an incredibly scenic venue for the race and the community itself always turn out to support the runners. The Gate City Striders as hosts and the Brookdale Fruit Farm, Kirk Motion Products and New England Country Pies as long time supportive sponsor help to provide a sharing of the success of the race with students of Hollis Brookline High.

The students themselves have always enthusiastically supported the race and the runners by manning the majority of the water stations along the 13 mile course. An rather than just handing out cups of water, this years 75 students created a different theme for each station and participated in some antics which provided many runners with the encouragement they needed to finish Applefest's rather challenging course. The concept works out so well that the runner vote for their favorite water station and the students at the winning station receive prizes.
